

Dear {{Salutation or 'friend'}},

We invite you to join us for the second installment of the three-part series for healthcare professionals, Delaware's End-of-Life Options Act: Responding to a patient's request, taking place Tuesday, February 10, 1 pm EST.

REGISTER

Passing the Ron Silver/Heather Block End-of-Life Options Act in Delaware is a significant step forward in end-of-life care. Healthcare professionals need to understand the law's specifics and its implications for clinical practice. This session will provide a detailed overview of the medical aid-in-dying process, focusing on the roles of providers.

ATTEND WEBINAR

Whether you work directly with patients at the end of life or support individuals and families navigating serious illness, this webinar will help you feel better prepared to respond to questions, provide accurate information and understand your professional responsibilities. Registration is free, but advance sign-up is required.

Please share this invitation within your networks; the more people who know their options, the more empowered our communities become.

We hope to see you there!

Warmly,
Claire

Dear {{Salutation or 'friend'}},

At Compassion & Choices, expanding what healthcare options are available to those at the end of their lives is only one aspect of our mission. More than just having a range of end-of-life care options to choose from, patients deserve for those care options to be of the highest quality — and to live free from barriers to accessing or learning about options available where they live.

Regardless of whether Delawareans request to use the new medical aid in dying law, or opt for a different type of care in their final moments, the steps they should take to ensure those wishes are honored look largely the same. In the First State and beyond, patients with the best chance to receive end-of-life care honoring their wishes are connected by a common thread: Personal Advocacy.

We invite you to join an upcoming virtual webinar, held just for Delaware residents, about personal advocacy in end-of-life care. This program, taking place over Zoom on Tuesday, June 30, from 6 – 7 p.m. EST, will focus on actionable ways to prepare for the care you want and navigate interactions with healthcare providers/institutions with confidence.
